In cases where the husband has to pay the wife's counsel the fee war are eaten, and the captured sold as slaves. These same Battas show a certain amount of culinary art in the preparation of this food for they broil the flesh over a brisk fire, and flavor it with salt, lemon, and red pepper.

A friend, of the writer's, who for more than forty years has been in the personal witness to the prevalence of the custom in Sumatra up till recent times. He was once making scientific investigations in the interior of that island, and was being entertained in the most hospitable manner by the native rajah, or chief, of the place he was then in. A feast had been made to which he was bidden, and to which he went, taking his own native servant with him. The banquet had proceeded for some time without interruption, when at last, as crown of the feast, a beautiful brown roast joint was brought from the back of the house to the open, airy place where the repast was being bed. This was continuous to the open thick weather. Eight lives lost. for some time without interruption, held. This was cut up without re-mark and handed round, and the Dutch gentleman was on the point of eating his portion, having raised part of it to his lips, when his servant rushed forward and stopped him, saying, "Master, master, do not eat; it is a boy!" had ordered a young boy to be killed est delicacy obtainable, and that the joint before them was the best part, the thigh.—From "Cannibalism as a Custom," by A. St. Johnston, in Popu-lar Science Monthly for December.

A temperance lecturer in London has given recently some curious statistics in regard to the amount expended in intoxicating liquor. He estimated the annual average thus spent in the last ten years at $720,000,000. This gives an expenditure of $60,000,000. an expenditure of $60,000,000 every month, of $15,000,000 every week, and of $25 every second, night and day. There are 3,508,480 letters in the Bible, and if $205 were placed on every letter it would represent the annual expen-diture. The grain consumed by the brewers and distillers is sufficient to provide four loaves of bread per week to every family in the United Kingdom. These certainly are startling facts.

Why Women Figure Most Frequently as

"About two out of three of all the di-vorce suits brought are instituted by worce suits brought are instituted by women," said a prominent lawyer, "and the causes for it are numerous and curious. You wouldn't think, now, that women would have more of the aggressive spirit and pluck necessary to go through with divorces than men, but they have. Most people are apt to imagine that men are the ones to bring their troubles into court; that they are by nature likely to choose a bold surgical treatment, as it were, and get their marital troubles ended completely. It is easy to pleasure a timid woman cowering at the thought of lawyers and courts, and preferring anything to the publicity of the Common Pleas. But all that is sentiment and exactly contrary to all experience. It is the men trary to all experience. It is the men who shrink from the divorce courts."

"How is that?" was asked.
"First of all," explained the lawyer, "there is the question of expense, which to a man in moderate circumstances means a great deal. When a man brings a divorce-suit he does so with his ever open to the fact that he will brings a divorce-suit he does so with his eyes open to the fact that he will not only have to pay the fees and expenses of the lawyer retained by him, but also the counsel employed by his wife. Now, when a woman resolves upon a separation, if she has any good reason for it, she has the comforting conviction that it is going to cost her nothing. In four cases out of five, where the woman is the plaintiff, the counsel exacts, say, a preliminary fee of $25, and it is on the distinct understanding that, in the event of the application being successful and the husband being mulcted in costs, the money is returned to her. So you see that in the financial aspect of the question the woman is at an advantage.

"Then," the lawyer went on, "the

"Then," the lawyer went on, "the woman feels her wrongs much more than the man. Mr. Blank bears the situation sullenly, but very well. When he leaves the house in the morning he bangs the door spitefully after him, and in a few moments is wrapped up in the thousand and one interests of the day. Now, Mrs. Blank hears that spiteful door-bang and broods over it, and is mad all the morning because she can't mad all the morning because she can treply to it. The house is her world, and everything about it suggests Mr. Blank, and, of course, unhappiness. Now, Blank is a devil-may-care sort of a fellow. He gets drunk at his club, and comes home or stays away just as he thinks fit. The world says nothing. When he feels mad he can go to his home. Sreak up the furniture, and swear at his wife until he gets tired, and then can rush out of the front door.

"Now what does all this lead to?" he continued, energetically. "Well, I'll tell you. The woman soon begins to seek for sympathy among her feminine friends, and she gets it every time—I don't want you to make any mistake about that. This sympathy-seeking is responsible for half the marital litigation. It doesn't take long for the lady to magnify her troubles, and then her friends make a martyr out of her and cause her to believe that she is the most interestingly ill-used being on earth, while in all probability she is nothing of the kind. This ends, sooner or later, in a visit to the divorce lawyer, and that settles the business. A man doesn't go and relate his troubles to his friends as a woman does. If he did the proportion of masculine and feminine plaintiffs would be more even. It is the custom of the husband to let confidences about domestic matters severely alone, and so he doesn't receive any advice which would bring him within has to pay the wife's counsel the fee allowed by the court is $35 and $50. That's nothing, though, compared with a case I know of, where a husband some years ago obtained a divorce from the Legislature. He was rich, and it cost him $150,000. One member there, he told me, got $10,000 to vote for the bill. Seven months after the passage of the act the divorced wife died, and the husband didn't give up kicking himself for a year. His freedied, and the husband didn't give up kicking himself for a year. His freedom had cost him just $21,428.50 per month. He had imagined that his wife was going to live for years. Nowadays the Legislature can't grant divorces for causes that would justify the giating in applicant at the court." victim in applying to the courts.
